

Website Hosting

1. Getting Started

- Have you registered a domain name for your website?
- Purchase a domain name from an Approved Host or an ICANN accredited agency to ensure your domain name is securely purchased
- The majority of web hosting companies offer domain registration services and you will often find that a domain name is included with the purchase of web hosting.
- Make a list of services and features you require for your website. Here are a few basic requirements when making your list:

How much are you willing to pay?

How much disc space will I need?

- Depending on the type of web site you are building, most sites don't require much more than 10MB to build. Extra features such as photo galleries, databases, etc require more space. Always over estimate or select a company who can accommodate your expansion in the future.

How much traffic will your site receive?

- When starting out, this question may pose as a difficult one to figure out as you may not be aware of how popular your site will be. Always good tip of advice, always over estimate to ensure you don't incur any additional costs.

What web hosting server should I choose?

- You have the choice between UNIX and Windows NT. It's a matter of selecting the right server that will accommodate the features you have planned for the site.
